HAD THE EAR MARKS OF BLOODY MURDER

The Corpus Delicti is yet to be Discovered.

The road between the sheriff's office and a point near the river was superheated yesterday by an automobile conveying Sheriff Adams, Deputy Mickey and Constable Murphy to a supposed scene of slaughter.

The telephone bell jangled furiously late in the afternoon. An excited woman was at the other end of the wire. She thought that the sheriff's office would like to know that murder had been committed and it must have been an exceedingly atrocious one for she had seen the murderer and he was covered with the blood of his victim.

At any rate, she said he had told her so and had offered in extenuation of his crime that the man he had slain, in his life time, had been a bad man. He had not told her this in confidence so that she felt at liberty to communicate the intelligence to the sheriff's office.

The man, she said, was a Mexican and had passed through her yard. It was then that the automobile race was begun. The sheriff and posse drove to the house, not expecting to find the slayer there but to get a start; the rest would be easy; they could follow him to his lair by the blood dripping from his clothing and his slaughter-stained hands.

There was no blood trail but the gut-law was overtaken and captured asleep. There was a good deal of blood on him but it seemed to have come from his mouth and nose where some body had "gasted him one." He was too drunk to describe recent occurrences or to say where he lived. He was brought to the jail and last night had not got so that a satisfactory conversation with him could be held.

er Persian. The Chinese manuscript was written about 1120 A. D., on silk and is remarkable for its beauty of the writing. It contains the works of Chuang Tzu, fourth and third centuries B. C.

Chuang Tzu, who had a brilliant style and was a master of irony, attacked the schools of Confucius and Mo Ti with great ability. He abounds in anecdotes of the author is the following:

"Chuang Tzu was fishing in the P'u when the Prince of Chu sent two high officials to ask him to take charge of the administration of the Chu state.

"Chuang Tzu went on fishing, and, without turning his head, said: 'I have heard that in Chu there is a sacred tortoise which has been dead some 3,000 years, and that the prince keeps this tortoise carefully inclosed in a chest on the altar of his ancestral temple. Now would this tortoise rather be dead and have its remains venerated, or be alive and wagging its tail in the mud?'"

"It would rather be alive," replied the two officials, "and wagging its tail in the mud."

"'Begone!' cried Chuang Tzu. 'I too will wag my tail in the mud.'"

"Here are some of his witty sayings: 'A man who knows that he is a fool is not a great fool.'
 "Charity and duty to one's neighbor are as caravansaries established by wise rulers of old; you may stop there one night, but not for long, or you will incur reproach."
 "Birth is not a beginning; death is not an end."
 "Alas! man's knowledge reaches to the hair on a hair, but not to eternal peace."

The Persian manuscript is an illuminated and illustrated copy of the "Masnavi i ma'navi" of Jalal ud-Din Rumi, a famous nuptial poet. Its influence on Persian literature is comparable to the influence on European literature of Dante's Divine Comedy, from which, in point of date, it is not far removed. This manuscript of the poem was written in 1235 A. D., thirty-four years after the death of the author. It is probably the oldest complete copy of the work existing in Europe.

The handwriting is extremely beautiful. In addition to the illuminated text there are numerous miniatures in rich and delicate colors, while gold is largely employed throughout.

The book possesses an interest from the point of view of the history of art, since it bears out the theory that there was in Turkestan a local school of art which arose from the earlier Indo-Hellenistic Buddhist art, and which, in certain cases, but not to any very marked degree, may have been influenced by Chinese art. This local art of Turkestan was the inspirer of the classical Persian art. The manuscript now in the museum was no doubt painted or written either in Turkestan or northern Persia and found its way to the library of the Sultans of Goicanda in central India. Thence it found its way back to Persia and ultimately to Europe, where it was sold.—New York Sun.

Local Lodge Lore

By GEORG ELIOT MILLER

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD

Phoenix lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood opened its meeting last Saturday evening with all the officers in their chairs and a large attendance. Brother McNeely made his report of the meeting held in Tucson last week, which he attended as a delegate from Phoenix lodge. Brother McNeely stated that he did not believe that there could possibly be a more beautiful scene in a lodge room than when a class of one hundred forty-six young men and women were lined up awaiting their initiation. Brother McNeely certainly knows just what he is talking about, for he had the pleasure of witnessing one of those scenes in Tucson last week at the hall of the Fraternal Brotherhood.

The work was beautifully exemplified by Supreme President Fochay, who informed Brother McNeely that he regretted very much that he would be unable to come to Phoenix and officiate for the Phoenix, but he relieved our delegate by promising to come at a time when the lodge had a large class to be initiated.

Brother and Sister B. E. Marks paid the lodge their first visit for some time, as it has just been learned that Brother Marks has been very ill. The brotherhood regrets very much that Brother Marks chose to keep his illness a secret, but are glad that he is now up and able to be with them again. Both he and Sister Marks made a few short remarks which were heartily received.

There was a large class initiated into the mysteries of the Brotherhood, the names of which are quoted here as follows: Grace Wolf, John S. Isaac, Francis B. Linstrom, Eliaz R. Hall, Earl G. Townsend, Frank Mossamer, Frank A. Jefferson, Lyman M. Laney, Jessie A. Sinkham, Thomas Kerwin, Marvin Oglesby, Norma Smith, Harry C. Harten, Clyde J. Humeau, Mrs. Lillian Mossamer, John Quist, Josie Drew, Mrs. Pearl Jefferson, Hazel I. Smith, Francis M. Allen, Louis C. Odum, Edwin A. Nesbit, Wm. N. Klin, Harry L. Hutchison.

After the business had been disposed of the lodge adjourned and a social session was held. Refreshments were served and every one present had a lovely time.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE

It is proposed at the Grand Lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose to establish a tuberculosis sanitarium preferably in or near Phoenix. Brother Leach, who attended the convention of the lodge, made a strong talk before that body, pointing out the great climate and also making efforts to have a committee appointed from the convention to come to the Salt River Valley and investigate the climatic conditions of the valley as well as to look over the ground which the Moose lodge offered to donate for a site. The matter has not been fully settled upon as yet.

W. H. Tobin, from Grafton, W. Va., Lodge No. 638, visited the lodge and made a brief talk. J. J. Leppard, of Panama, Central America, Lodge No. 82, was also a visitor.

Brothers Suris and Donovan, who were reported ill some time ago are now able to be up about their homes.

Brother D. W. Curtis has been reported ill in San Francisco. There were two new applications balloted upon, and two applications for membership read.

Brother Suris has received his benefits for nine weeks sickness.

There is some talk of changing the meeting night from Friday to Tuesday, providing a hall can be secured. The matter will be settled next Friday evening and all members are requested to be present.

MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA

Owing to the vacancy which occurred by the leaving of Brother J. W. Arnold, who has gone to Crown King to accept a position with the Santa Fe, there will be an election of officers on next Wednesday evening and it is imperative that every member of the Camp be present, at this is a matter of great importance to them all.

Wm. Fogal was brought to Phoenix by the Glendale Camp to be given the first degree, which was beautifully exemplified.

Transfer card of Neighbor John Hyder, of Tempe Camp No. 11500; Geo. F. Daugerty from Uvalde, Tex., Camp No. 12185, and W. E. Van Meter, Mesa Camp, No. 14875, of Mesa, Arizona, were read and duly elected to membership in Phoenix Camp No. 11462.

B. P. O. ELKS

Brother E. J. Lipshon, who has been seriously ill at Lake Tahoe for some time with pneumonia, returned Wednesday and is looking much better than his friends expected to find him.

The meeting of next Thursday evening will be the only meeting held during the month of September.

ODD FELLOWS

F. W. Posteker was elected a member of Phoenix Lodge No. 2, last Tuesday evening.

The lodge has adjusted the rates of rental with Mrs. Monahan, and will continue meeting in the building indefinitely.

Chas. Papen received his second degree last evening.

J. E. Johnson, past grand, of Wilcox lodge No. 15, of Wilcox, Ariz., visited with the brothers of Phoenix lodge last Tuesday evening and made an interesting talk along the good of the order. He states that the lodges in the northern part of the state are now preparing for their fall and winter work, which promises to be a very successful season.

REDMEN

Maricopa Tribe No. 19, of the Improved Order of Redmen, held a very busy business session last Thursday evening. There was a great amount of routine work disposed of and a number of good resolutions were introduced and passed.

Richard Yates, was given the Warriors' degree, after which refreshments were served and a social hour was spent very pleasantly.

EAGLES

The local nest of Eagles mourn the loss of Brother George Jedinsky, who died the fore part of the week. The brother was well known and well liked by everyone who knew him.

His remains were shipped to Michigan City, Indiana, for burial.

The services will be held at the home of relatives, to which the lodge extend their deepest sympathy.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The loss of Brother M. E. Cribbens, an engineer on the Arizona & Eastern, and a resident of Phoenix for four years, who died suddenly of heart failure while at work on his engine this side of Ray Junction the early part of last week, is mourned by the Knights of Columbus as well as the different railway fraternities to which he belonged. His remains were shipped to Boone, Iowa, where his parents and other relatives reside. Brother Cribbens was a member of Marcos de Niza council, of Boone, whose members will attend the funeral.

MASONS

Among the visitors at lodge last Tuesday evening was Brother Wooster, who has the honor of being a member of one of the first Masonic lodges of the state of Maine, which is soon to celebrate its one hundred and fiftieth birthday. Brother Wooster gave quite a lengthy talk not only concerning the Masons but of the state.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

The session of Phoenix lodge No. 2, Knights of Pythias held on Friday night, the 29th, was well attended although there was no initiation and no degrees were conferred.

The regular routine business of the lodge was quickly transacted, after which a lively discussion of topics relating to the good of the order ensued. The matter of renewing the dispensation was taken up and the lodge decided to ask to have the dispensation continued for the regular period, and upon the same conditions as heretofore.

A greater and more enthusiastic attendance of those who are now members of the lodge was earnestly advocated by some of the more faithful ones. With a membership of nearly three hundred there is positively no reason why three-fourths of that number should not attend regularly, just as well as to have a hundred or one hundred and twenty-five in regular attendance. The lodge decided to start at once an active campaign to arouse interest and to get the members to participate in the proceedings of the meetings, and to that end directed that a committee of five be appointed to confer during the week and formulate some plan of carrying on this campaign and to report at the next meeting to be held Friday, September 6, 1912.

This committee is composed of the following members: Brother Knights Claude D. Jones, Chairman; J. E. Powell, I. L. Gregory, J. H. Kinney and Tom M. Smith.

After the session of the lodge the members adjourned to Donofrio's where delightful refreshments were served.

WOMAN DEFEATED HARRISON

Han Gen, Benjamin Harrison, when president of the United States in 1892, appointed Colonel Coppinger a brigadier general, he no doubt would have been re-elected president.

Colonel Coppinger was a son-in-law of James G. Blaine, at that time Secretary of State. To Blaine the president had said he could not advance a colonel of less than a year's standing over a long list of eligibles, holding that to do so would be a great wrong. To this Mr. Blaine agreed.

Soon after, however, Mrs. Blaine called in person upon the president, and in no uncertain terms demanded Colonel Coppinger's promotion. President Harrison with quiet dignity but characteristic firmness refused to establish a precedent of this character.

Mrs. Blaine arose and with an ominous swish of her skirts swept out of the presence of the chief executive of the nation. Mr. Blaine resigned from the cabinet on the eve of the convention. Mr. Harrison was defeated at the November election.—Magazine of American History.

THE WATERMELON SEASON

Home grown watermelons are coming to town. Not just an occasional melon, but melons by the wagon load, and that ought to make anybody glad he is alive.

For, whereas in olden times only the gods could quaff nectar and dine on ambrosia, and then only after a hard climb up Olympus, nowadays the humblest citizen may take two bits, walk out into the street and probe about in a pile of hay in a wagon box until he uncovers a cool, green object that taken down the alley and slashed with a jackknife, will render up bliss enough for a half dozen persons.

The greatest evidence that there ever was a Garden of Eden lies in the fact that watermelons exist. You can conceive of a pumpkin as having its origin elsewhere, and green beans and cucumbers might have sprung up any place almost, but watermelon must have had its origin in a place that was peculiarly blessed. When watermelon was in the making the birds must have been singing all the day, the sun shining from a cloudless sky, and the fragrance of choice flowers have filled the air; the little brooks must have rippled joyfully over the whitest of pebbles, and the earth have been mellowed by an endless springtime and softened by crystal dews.

For all the pleasures of an unspoiled palate are aroused by a slice of watermelon properly eaten, and all the spices of Arab and the choicest fruits of the sunny slopes of Italy cannot compare with it for giving exquisite delight.

And yet, with all its wonderful joy-giving possibilities, it is not something that is hedged about and kept for kings and chorus girls.

It is the most democratic of vegetables and knows no caste or rank.

Split open among the potential shadows of Farmer Jones's forbidden patch, and eaten with a countenance submerged, it is as sweet and refreshing as if partaken of with a golden fork from the royal plate of England. Watermelon rinds in the garbage are no emblem of aristocracy, but a sign of satisfaction, and the man who walks down the street with a watermelon under his arm is a brother to us all, and gets a smiling high sign from high and low alike.

Chemistry has done some wonderful things with coal tar and the like, but the chemistry of man isn't one, two, three with the chemistry of Nature, that starts in with a seed that a man can't tell from the threat of a cucumber, and touches it with heat and moisture until it reaches out its tendrils and catches the sunbeams and the dews and the mysteries of the soil, mixes them with the redness of the sunset and incloses them in a case of protective green and turns over to mankind, as the finished product, a watermelon.—
